1. REPRESENTATION APPROVED

This Agreement is to confirm that you have retained The Feldman Law Firm, P.C. (the "Firm") to represent you in a suit to be filed against _____ (list one or more potentially responsible parties) and all other responsible parties, concerning _____ (briefly describe the nature of your case and your injuries or damages). By signing this Agreement, you are authorizing the Firm to file suit on your behalf to pursue your claim. Please note that this agreement does not include any matters not described in this Agreement, and securing the Firm's services for other matters will require another separate agreement similar to this one.

2. CONTINGENT FEE AND EXPENSES

In consideration of the services rendered and to be rendered by the Firm, you hereby set over, give to, assign, transfer, grant and convey to the Firm a present forty percent (40 %) interest in your cause or causes of action and any recovery arising out of or related to the dispute described above. Recovery is meant to include anything of value you receive through settlement or judgment, and includes, property, money, benefits, the forgiveness of debt, or any other thing of value, no matter how described, and also includes, without limitation, common law or statutory damages, exemplary, multiplied, or punitive damages, attorneys' fees, interest and court costs. If your recovery is unliquidated, such as an agreement to provide benefits in the future, the value of the recovery means the present value of the property or benefit recovered as of the date of settlement or judgment. You acknowledge that you are giving up at this time to the Firm the above stated amount and that the stated percentage will be paid to the Firm from the total amount of settlement or judgment recovered, after the reimbursement of any expenses advanced or incurred by the Firm.

The Firm will be responsible for advancing, at its sole discretion, all reasonably necessary expenses of the litigation, but you will be required to repay any expenses advanced out of your portion of the recovery. These expenses typically include filing fees, service fees, travel and lodging expenses, expert witness fees, trial and litigation support fees, audio-visual equipment charges, deposition or videographer fees, transcript fees, and all other expenses incurred by the Firm as a consequence of pursuing this case which are not otherwise regular overhead of the Firm. Charges for in-house expenses are contained in Exhibit A.

By way of example, if the Firm has advanced or incurred $10,000 of expenses, and there is a $150,000 recovery, $10,000 will be reimbursed to the Firm, and the contingent fee will be calculated as 40 % of $150,000, or $60,000. Thus the client will receive a net of $80,000 and the firm will receive a net $70,000 in this example. If the recovery is less than the expenses advanced or incurred, the Firm will receive the entire recovery as a partial repayment of the expenses it has advanced or incurred.

In the event there is no recovery, you will owe no fee to the Firm, and under no circumstance will you ever be required to repay expenses advanced or incurred by the Firm except as set forth above.

In addition, it is possible your claim will involve, in part, a claim for attorneys' fees under state or federal law. Sometimes, courts are reluctant to award a contingent amount as a fee or the law may prevent the award of a contingent amount as a fee. We will therefore keep track of our hourly work on your case to ensure that your fee claim is maximized in the event this case proceeds to a final judgment. However, if there is a final judgment which includes a fee award, you agree that the firm will be entitled to the greater of the contingent fee stated above or the attorneys' fees awarded in the judgment.

By way of example, if you recover $150,000 from a final judgment, $110,000 of which is for damages, and $40,000 of which is for attorneys' fees, and the firm has advanced $20,000 of expenses, then the firm will be paid $60,000 out of the $150,000 recovery as its contingent fee and will also be reimbursed its $20,000 in expenses, so that the net to the client would be $70,000. Conversely, if you recover $150,000 in a final judgment, but only $60,000 of which is for damages and $90,000 of which is for attorneys' fees, then the firm will be paid $90,000 as its fee and will be reimbursed the $20,000 of expenses advanced, so the net to the client would be $40,000. Again, if you recover nothing, you will not be liable for any attorneys' fees or expenses of the Firm.

3. YOUR CONSENT IS REQUIRED TO SETTLE

As with all cases, the decision whether to settle or not to settle remains, ultimately, with the client. If a settlement offer is proposed, the Firm will provide you advice whether we believe the settlement is in your best interest. This involves looking carefully at the risks, rewards and costs associated with continuing to pursue your case verses accepting the settlement. Although it is certainly not the Firm's experience, it is possible that the Firm may advocate acceptance of a settlement but you might disagree. If that occurs, the Firm may determine to withdraw from this representation, but only with court approval and only if doing so is consistent with ethical and professional obligations we owe you.

4. DISCOUNT FOR PROMPT SETTLEMENT

The Firm believes it is usually in the interest of its clients to settle cases early, before the expenses and time involved with formally having to file a lawsuit are incurred. Therefore, unless unusual circumstances exist, such as the possible running of the statute of limitations for your claims, the firm will make a good faith, reasonable effort to resolve your case before a suit is filed. If we are successful, and are able to settle the case with your consent before we file suit, then the Firm will discount its contingent fee interest by half, to 20 % of the recovery. All other terms of this Agreement concerning the reimbursement of expenses we may have advanced or incurred on your behalf still apply, as set forth above.

5. INTEREST ON EXPENSES

It is not anticipated that any amounts will be advanced by the Firm directly to you in this matter. However, the Firm, at its option, may charge interest to any amounts advanced by the Firm to pay reimbursable expenses as set forth above at the lesser of (i) the Bank Rate Monitor National Index for personal loans effective on the date of the initial advance or (ii) the highest lawful rate allowed by applicable law.

6. COUNTERCLAIMS

Occasionally, the filing of a lawsuit may result in a counterclaim being filed against you. If the counterclaim arises out of the dispute referenced above, the Firm will defend you at no extra charge. However, if a defendant brings an unrelated claim against you, such as for money claimed to be owed, we will need to enter into a separate fee agreement to cover my firm's work on unrelated counterclaims. In no event will the Firm be liable for any counterclaim judgment against you, and you acknowledge and understand that bringing a lawsuit frequently invites counterclaims and may well result in an unanticipated contingent or actual liability.

7. ASSOCIATION OF ADDITIONAL COUNSEL

In some cases, we may determine to associate other lawyers or firms in this case who are not affiliated with the Feldman Law Firm, P.C., subject to your written permission. Under no circumstances will our doing so increase the total fee owed by you under this Agreement, and we will fully disclose all terms of the association in advance.

8. APPEAL AND COLLECTION

This agreement does not provide for costs or fees of an appeal or for collection proceedings.

If the Firm and the client agree that an appeal is appropriate in this case, or it becomes necessary to defend an appeal by one or more defendants, you may, at your option, either (1) retain the Firm at its prevailing hourly rate for appellate services as set forth on Exhibit A or (2) retain the Firm through a contingent fee payment of an additional ten percent (10%). In the event you select the first option, we may require a monetary retainer to secure payment of our hourly services. You may also, of course, retain separate counsel for any appeal in this action, but your decision to do so will not alter or reduce in any way the contingent fee amounts otherwise owed hereunder.

If the Firm and the client agree that collection proceedings are appropriate, the Firm will not charge the client for attorneys' fees related to collection, but the Firm will be entitled to any additional attorneys' fee award recovered in a collection proceeding, and collection expenses will be charged against the client's portion of the recovery.

9. YOUR WARRANTIES TO THE FIRM

All lawsuits require close cooperation between a client and their attorneys. Therefore, by signing this Agreement, you agree to reasonably cooperate with the Firm in the prosecution of your case, and to make yourself reasonably available for any required hearings, depositions, or mediations, as the case may be, and that you will, at the Firm's request, attend any trial of your case.

You also warrant that neither the Firm nor anyone else acting or purporting to act on the Firm's behalf has offered or promised you anything of value in connection with your decision to enter into this Agreement, and you further acknowledge and understand that: (a) the Firm cannot warrant or guarantee the outcome of your case; (b) the Firm has not represented to you that you will recover all or any of the funds or compensation desired; and (c) obtaining a judgment does not guarantee that the opposing party will be able or willing to satisfy the judgment.

Finally, you warrant that you are competent to enter into this Agreement, have full authority to do so, and that you have not sold or transferred any interest in your case to a third party.
